MUZEJ PRE MUZEJA

Muzej istorije Jugoslavije ove godine beleži jedan skoro zaboravljeni jubilej – 50. godišnjicu prve velike proslave Dana mladosti na stadionu JNA u Beogradu. Godišnjicu dostojnu sećanja Muzeja „25. maj“, osnovanog početkom 60-ih godina proteklog stoteća, koji i svojim nazivom i svojom najbrojnijom zbirkom čuva uspomenu i materijalne ostatke najveće manifestacije iz perioda tzv. Nove Jugoslavije. A kolika je i kakva ta manifestacija bila možda najbolje govori podatak da se i danas, dvadeset godina od ukidanja te proslave, na dan 25. maja, u Muzej „25. maj“, u organizaciji najrazličitijih društava i klubova, donose štafete sa porukama iz svih republika zemlje koja više ne postoji. Suprotno definiciji po kojoj su muzeji mesta u kojima se čuva prošlost, sačuvana prošlost postaje sadašnjost, na način kako to vidi jedno drevno shvatanje vremena: postoje tri vremena, i sva tri su sadašnjost – stvarna sadašnjost, sadašnjost prošlosti i sadašnjost budućnosti. Sadašnjost prošlosti je sećanje, koje se odvija u sadašnjosti. Tako muzeji postaju mesta u kojima se i prošlost, poput sadašnjosti, takođe kreće, a sačuvani artefakti istražuju, proučavaju i preispituju. Više od dvadeset dve hiljade štafetnih palica su svakako

MUSEUM BEFORE THE MUSEUM

In the year 2007 Museum of Yugoslav History marks an almost forgotten jubilee – half a century of the first grand celebration of the Youth Day on the stadium of Yugoslav People's Army (stadium of JNA) in Belgrade. An anniversary worth marking by the Museum „25 May“ founded at the beginning of the 60-ies, which, by its name and by its most numerous collection keeps memory and material remains of the biggest public manifestation from the period of so-called New Yugoslavia. How big it was and what was its character speaks the fact that even today, twenty years after repealing of the celebration, on the day of May 25th, relay batons coupled with messages are still being brought from all the republics of the former country, in organisation of various societies and clubs. Contrary to the definition of museum as place where past is being saved, „saved past“ becomes „present“ in the manner described by an ancient notion of time: there are three times, and all three are now – the real present, the presence of the past, and the presence of the future. The presence of the past is memory existing in the present time. In that way museums become places in which both past and present are still moving on while the saved artefacts are being observed, described and studied.

Collection of more than 22 000 relay batons are certainly the most remarkable if not the most important remnant of all happenings and activities that were part of the decades-long phenomenon of Josip Broz Tito's birthday celebrations – rallies, slogans, wellcoming, seeing-off and gift-presenting ceremonies. Increasing interest of domestic and foreign researchers in this mass public and social phenomenon of the so-najmarkantiji ali ne i najvažniji sadržaj svih zbivanja i aktivnosti koji su pratili decenijski fenomen proslave rođendana Josipa Broza Tita – sletova, parola, ispraćaja i darivanja. Veliko interesovanje kako domaćih tako i inostranih istraživača za ovu masovnu društvenu pojavu tzv. „titovskog“ perioda samo su dokaz da priča o štafeti nije do kraja ispričana. U godinama nakon Titove smrti i formiranja Muzeja, naša pažnja je, zbog ogromnog broja eksponata bila usmerena na adekvatan smeštaj zbirke, primarnu zaštitu i elementarnu obradu. Dramatični događaji početkom 90-ih godina koji su doveli do raspada zemlje u značajnoj meri devastirali su i samu ustanovu, što je, 1996. godine, rezultiralo njenom transformacijom, u znatno smanjenom obimu. Time je svaki ozbiljniji rad na istraživanju ove zbirke, jedinstvene u svetskim muzejskim okvirima, bio onemogućen. Tek slede dublja i ozbiljnija teorijska, sociološka, politička i kulturološka istraživanja.

U telu štafeta „kriju“ se pisma. Njih je neuporedivo veći broj od palica, u nekima i po desetak. Neretko su vešto sakrivena u njihovim šupljinama i još uvek nisu pažljivo pročitana. Ali čak i na prvi pogled doživljavaju se autentičnim i samim tim vrednim i značajnim. Čitajući ih, i samo letimično, imamo utisak da prisustvujemo času istorije koji nikad nismo slušali, jer taj čas ne drže oni zaduženi da istoriju pišu, već ga ispisuju oni koji su mislili da je stvaraju. Ne postoji događaj u istoriji socijalističke Jugoslavije koji nije isписан na ovaj svojevrstan način, neposredno i samim tim uzbudljivo. I iskreno, ako je svojstvo iskrenosti da joj ni zakasnelo čitanje ne menja prvobitni smisao.

Poruke su, uostalom, neraskidivi deo svih predmeta poklonjenih Titu, bilo da je reč o likovnom delu, vezenom peškiru, maketi, plaketi ili štafeti. Nemoguće je i te called Titoist period prove that the story of Relay race is not completed yet. Because of the great number and scope of collected artefacts in the years that followed Tito's death and foundation of the Museum attention of the museum stuff was mainly focused on adequate storage, protection and elementary adaption of the collection. Dramatic circumstances at the beginning of the 90-ies that led to the disintegration of the country also caused considerable devastation of Museum facilities. Such unfavorable conditions disencouraged serious research of this collection, unique in the scope of the world museum collections. Profound theoretical, sociological, political and culturological research is yet to be done.

Hollow bodies of the relay batons „hide“ letters. The letters greatly outnumber the batons as some of the batons carry more than ten letters each. Often skilfully packed in, many of the letters have been registered but not yet carefully read. Even at first glance they look authentic and therefore are valuable and significant to us. Even provisory reading gives impression that we are attending a history lesson that we have never heard before, this one not written by official history writers but by those who thought they were making history. There is not a single event in the history of the socialist Yugoslavia that is not reflected in this specific media, direct, exciting and sincere, if the characteristics of sincerity is – not to change its original meaning even when read after a significant elapse of time.

Messages are, however, inseparable part of all items given as presents to Tito be they a work of visual art, an embroidered towel, a maquette, or a baton. It is impossible to understand either the items or the times without messages that accompany them. Woven in or embroidered, chiseled in silver and gold, incrusterated, Srmom izatkane u osnovu potke, cizelirane zlatnom i srebrnom žicom, izrezbarene, inkrustrirane, isklesane u mermeru ili, kao one najstarije – sa željom da dugo traju – ispisane navlaženom mastiljavom olovkom, poruke svedoče o vremenu koje bi, da njih nema, možda izgledalo sasvim drugačije.

RELAY RACE – A SYMBOL OF TOGETHERNESS

ŠTAFETA – SIMBOL ZAJEDNIŠTVA

Ritual nošenja štafete kojom su Titu prenošene rođendanske čestitke sa željama za dug život i dobro zdravlje osmišljen je još 1945. godine kada je Centralni komitet Saveza komunističke omladine Jugoslavije doneo odluku da se 25. maja, prvi put u slobodi, svečano proslavi rođendan Josipa Broza Tita.¹ Štafetne palice (preko 22000), kao materijalni trag ove manifestacije koja je trajala sve do 1987. godine, čuvaju se u Muzeju istorije Jugoslavije.

Prvu Titovu štafetu inicirao je Josif Prohaska, predavač fiskulture u Kragujevačkoj gimnaziji i nekadašnji član Sokolskog društva², na čiji predlog su organizovana masovna omladinska štafetna trčanja širom Jugoslavije u čast Titovog rođendana. Trčeći trasom dugom 9000 kilometara 12500 omladinaca, vojnika i fiskulturnika nosilo je šest republičkih štafeta, štafetu Armije, Beograda, Trsta i Julijске krajine, kao i nekoliko lokalnih, među kojima i kragujevačku Plavu knjigu za čiji je nastanak vezana zanimljiva priča. Naime, Kragujevčani nisu bili zadovoljni duguljastim cilindrom, sačinjenim od sjajnog lima u fabrici oružja, pa su na kasapskoj hartiji za nekoliko dana sakupili oko 15000 potpisa omladine Šumadije i na brzinu je ukoričili u knjigu koja je naziv dobila po boji korica koje su po prvoj zamisli trebalo da budu od crvenog platna, ali ga u Kragujevcu tada nije bilo.³

The ritual of carrying a relay baton containing birthday best wishes for a long life and good health to Tito was devised as early as 1945 when the Central Committee of the League of Communist Youth of Yugoslavia made decision to celebrate festively May the 25th, the birthday of Josip Broz Tito, for the first time in freedom.¹ The batons (more than 22 000 of them) are being kept in the Museum of Yugoslav History as material trace of this manifestation that lasted until 1987.

The first Tito's Relay Race was initiated by Josif Prohaska, the physical training teacher in Kragujevac Secondary School and former member of the Sokols (Falcon) sports society² on basis of whose proposal mass relay races of young people were organized throughout Yugoslavia in honour of Tito's birthday. Running a 9 000 km long route, 12 500 young people, soldiers and athletes carried six republic batons, baton of the Army, baton of Belgrade, Trieste and the Julijan krajina (district), as well as a number of local ones, among them the Blue book of Kragujevac the creation of which is connected to an interesting story. Namely, citizens of Kragujevac were not happy with cylindrical baton of shiny tin made in the arms factory so they took ordinary butcher's packing paper and in few days collected around 15 000 signatures of the youth of Šumadija and hastily bound it in a book. It was named after the colour of its cover originally intended to be made of red cloth which, at the time, could not be found in Kragujevac.³

The number of batons and kilometres covered increased from year to year so that as early as 1950 the number of carriers was more than a million.⁴ The relay races were divided into major and local

Broj štafeta i pređenih kilometara uvećavao se iz godine u godinu, da bi već 1950. godine broj nosilaca bio veći od milion.⁴ Štafete su se delile na glavne i lokalne. Glavnih je, pored republičkih, bilo još desetak čiji su se darodavci menjali u skladu sa aktuelnom političkom i društvenom situacijom. Stalne su bile štafete glavnih i velikih gradova, kao i Armije, kojih je često bilo nekoliko za istu godinu jer su ih njeni različiti rodovi i vidovi slali posebno (vazduhoplovstvo, mornarica, kopnene snage, graničari, padobranci i pojedine vojne oblasti). Pošiljaoci su bili i pioniri, omladina, razne društvene, političke i radne organizacije, sportska društva, a obavezno i graditelji nečeg važnog što se te godine gradilo poput autoputa, pruge, hidroelektrane, Novog Beograda... Svake godine bilo je bezbroj lokalnih i regionalnih štafeta koje su se slivale u tokove glavnih, a predavane su lokalnim rukovodiocima na mitinzima organizovanim u sedištima okruga. Svaka republika je imala svoju centralnu manifestaciju proslave Dana mladosti i time su svoj doprinos davali i oni koji nisu prisustvovali završnoj svečanosti na stadionu u Beogradu. Posebno uzbudženje predstavljalo je dočekivanje glavne štafete koju su ljudi u svojim mestima pozdravljali noseći zastave i transparente, bacajući cveće i pevajući.⁵

Pisane poruke su smeštane u unutrašnjost štafetnih palica koje su se otvarale i bilo ih je više nego štafeta jer je u neke stavljano i po desetak čestitki. Njima je izražavana ljubav darodavaca voljenom drugu Titu i ponos što ih vodi u svetliju budućnost, ali i zavet da će taj put pratiti i pored svih teškoća na njemu. Ideja komunikacije i izražavanja emocija ista je na ručno slikanim porukama koje predstavljaju prava mala umetnička dela, kao i na onim pisanim dečjom rukom na običnom belom papiru, iscepanom iz sveske.

Osim prvih štafeta 1945. godine koje je zbog odsustva primio u Zagrebu⁶, narednih godina, sve do 1956. godine, Tito je lično primao poslednje nosioca štafete pred Belim dvorom u ones. The major ones, together with the republic ones, numbered around ten, the senders changing from year to year, depending on current political and social situation. Constant ones were from capitals and big cities and from the Army, often comprising several for the same year, since its different services and branches sent their batons each (air-force, navy, land-forces, border-guards, parachutists and individual military regions). Among those who sent their best wishes were the pioneers, various youth, social, political and work organisations, sports societies, and, as a must, builders of some major project in the relevant year - highway, a railway line, hydroelectric power plant, New Belgrade... Every year there were numerous local and regional relay races that flowed into the major ones and the batons were handed over to local leaders at rallies organized in district centres. Every republic had its own central manifestation celebrating the Youth Day, so in that way those who did not attend the final celebration at Belgrade stadium took part. Welcoming of the main baton on the way was a matter of particular excitement, attending people carrying flags and slogans, throwing flowers and singing.⁵

Within hollow batons that could be opened, written messages largely over numbering the number of batons were placed (some of batons carried more than ten messages). They expressed love of senders for the beloved comrade Tito, their pride for being led by him into a brighter future, but also, their pledge to follow his path despite of all difficulties encountered on it. Both hand painted messages, which were real small pieces of art, and those written by a child's hand on an ordinary piece of paper thorn from a notebook, reveal the same idea of communication and expression of emotions.

Apart from the first batons in 1945 that due to his absence from Belgrade Tito received in Zagreb⁶, the Beogradu, čemu je prethodio svečani doček štafete na Trgu Republike. Koncept je prvi put promenjen 1953. godine kada su, posle predaje, u dvorištu Belog dvora članovi Saveza za telesno vaspitanje „Partizan“ izveli program sačinjen od gimnastičkih vežbi, da bi već 1955. godine završna svečanost na dan 25. maja bila preseljena sa Trga Republike na stadion Jugoslovenske narodne armije, odakle su nosioci išli prema Belom dvoru.⁷ Sledeće godine na stadion dolazi i Tito izražavajući želju da 25. maj postane smotra mladosti, dan sporta jugoslovenske omladine, dan fizičke i duhovne smotre u koji bi se uklopila i tradicionalna Titova štafeta. Tako Titov rođendan počinje da se proslavlja kao Dan mladosti (bilo je tendencija da se proglaši i državnim praznikom), a Titova štafeta menja naziv u Štafetu mladosti, menjajući i svoj karakter. Umesto više glavnih štafeta, Tito sada na stadionu, posle završenog sleta, prima samo jednu – saveznu štafetu, koja postaje simbol svih ostalih štafeta.⁸ Poslednji nosioci su birani following years (until 1956) Tito in person received the last runners of the relay race in front of Beli dvor (White Palace), his residence in Belgrade, after a formal reception of the relay runners at the Republic Square. The concept was changed in 1953 when, after the handing-over in front of Beli dvor, members of the Association for Physical Culture "Partisan" made a performance of athletic exercises; as soon as 1955 the final festivity on May 25th moved from the Republic Square to the Yugoslav People's Army (JNA) stadium, wherefrom the runners went to Beli dvor⁷. The following year Tito himself came to the stadium expressing his wish May 25th to become a festival of youth, the sports day of the Yugoslav youth, into which the traditional Tito's relay race would fit. Thus, Tito's birthday from that year celebrated as the Youth Day (there were tendencies to proclaim it a national holiday), and the name of Tito's Relay Race changes into the Relay Race of Youth changing its character at the same time. Instead of a number of major batons Tito now received at the stadium, after the gymnastic meet, only one baton - the federal one, which became representative of all the others.⁸ The last runners were selected from among the best students, workers and pupils of that year, mostly of workers', peasants' or farmers' origin, politically correct, and using the "republic quota" system for representation of all nations and nationalities.⁹ The manifestation had become stereotypical soon, with the programme that was repeated with minor changes from year to year and, accordingly, there was a need to refresh it. From 1965 on it was transformed into an evening performance beginning at 20 h (until then it began at 16 h) so that light show could be used, and always an ending with the fireworks. With too many mass numbers and military exercises contact with the audience, now in passive role, was lost. There were ideas to broaden the character of May 25th celebrations ključu” pripadnici svih naroda i narodnosti.⁹ Slet vrlo brzo postaje stereotipan i javlja se potreba za osveženjem programa koji se ponavlja sa malim varijacijama iz godine u godinu. svetlosni efekti, a završavao se uvek vatrometom. Sa suviše masovnih tačaka i vojnih vežbi izgubio se kontakt sa publikom koja je dovedena u pasivan položaj. Bilo je inicijativa da se 25. maju dâ širi karakter afirmacije rezultata mladih na svim poljima i da preraste u celovitu umetničku priredbu na najvišem nivou, ali se od toga malo uradilo.¹⁰ Javnost je putem radija i televizije, svakodnevno informisana o kretanju štafete i proslavama organizovanim u njenu čast.¹¹ Na taj dan uručivana su i priznanja najboljima za značajna ostvarenja u toj godini, a održavale su se i brojne zabavne aktivnosti poput drugarskih večeri, logorskih vatri, koncerata, igranki i izleta.¹²

so it would become a presentation of the achievements of young people in all fields and grow into an all-encompassing artistic performance at the highest level but nothing much has been achieved in that respect.¹⁰ The public was informed daily of the relay race progression and festivities organized in its honour by radio and TV.¹¹ On that day the best individuals were given awards for important achievements, and numerous entertainments such as comrade gatherings, campfires, concerts, dances and excursions were organized.¹²

The Youth Relay Race as a manifestation was increasingly formalized with the passing of time. Though the baton was created by prominent Yugoslav artists (Karanović, Petrić, Hadži-Boškov, Kučukalić, Kilić, Nemeć, Soldatović, Murataj, Siladi, Braniselj, Dešpali, Delziha...) who enjoyed this honour either on the basis of a competition or by invitation, it nevertheless lost its freshness and imaginative form that local batons made by anonymous authors used to have, and became uniform. Materials most often used for the making of batons were wood and metal, often precious, as gold and silver, with gem stones added, while a five pointed star, a torch, or state emblem were, as a rule, placed at the top of the baton.

The day of Tito's death, 4 May 1980, found the Youth Relay Race on its way through Croatia and the baton was put on the catafalque where the receiver lay in state in the Assembly of the SFRY.

The Relay Race continued its life after death of Josip Broz with the idea of becoming symbol of love and devotion to his work, and it was handed over, under a portrait of Josip Broz, to the president of the League of Socialist Youth of Yugoslavia on the Yugoslav People's Army stadium.¹³ jugoslovenski umetnici (Karanović, Petrić, Hadži-Boškov, Kučukalić, Kilić, Nemes, Soldatović, Murataj, Silađi, Braniselj, Dešpali, Delziha...) koji tu čast zaslужuju bilo konkursom, bilo pozivom, ona gubi svoju svežinu i maštvitost oblika koju su imale lokalne štafete anonimnih autora, i postaje uniformna. Najčešći materijali izrade bili su drvo i metal, često plemenit poput zlata i srebra sa dodatkom dragog kamenja, a zvezda petokraka, buktinja ili grb su obeležja koja su, po pravilu, postavljana na vrh palice.

Na dan Titove smrti, 4. maja 1980. godine, Štafeta mladosti zatekla se na putu po Hrvatskoj i položena je na odar primaoca u Skupštini SFRJ.

Nastavlja svoj život i posle smrti Josipa Broza sa idejom da postane simbol ljubavi i odanosti njegovom delu, a predaje se ispod portreta Josipa Broza, predsedniku Saveza socijalističke omladine Jugoslavije na stadionu Jugoslovenske narodne armije.¹³

Atmosfera u društvu se promenila i pisane poruke uz štafetu dobijaju prizvuk pesimizma, u njima se pominju nezaposlenost i pad standarda, a slet 1987. godine nosi provokativni naziv „Upalite svetlo“. Pokreću se i polemike o daljoj судбини manifestacije, slovenački omladinci predlažu njeno ukidanje, a poslednju Štafetu mladosti 1987. godine pratio je skandal u koji su bile uključene i vojska i policija. Ponuđeni plakat za proslavu Dana mladosti, idejno rešenje ljubljanskog dizajnerskog ateljea „Novi kolektivizam“, u stvari je bio prepravljeni nemački nacistički plakat, kopija dela „Treći rajh“ Riharda Klajna koji predstavlja novog nemačkog čoveka. I sama štafetna palica nije ličila na štafetu, građevinu na četiri stuba nije bilo moguće nositi. Čak i rešenje koje je na kraju usvojeno, razlikovalo se od prethodnih štafeta. Urađena je od pleksiglasa, sa osam kapi krvi koje, gledano iz današnje perspektive, mogu nagovještavati početak prolivanja krvi na ovim prostorima.

However, climate in the society had changed and written messages acquired a note of pessimism; unemployment and falling standards of living were mentioned in them, and the rally of 1987 carried a provocative title "Switch on the Light". There were debates about further destiny of the manifestation, Slovenian young people suggested an end be put to it, and the last Youth Relay Race in 1987 was accompanied by a scandal where even the Army and police were involved. The poster offered for the celebration of the Youth Day, concept of the design studio "New Collectivism" from Ljubljana, was in fact an altered German Nazi poster, copy of Richard Klein's painting "The Third Reich" representing a new German. The baton itself was not like a baton; a four-pillared contraption could not be carried. Even the solution that was finally approved was different from the former ones. It was made of Plexiglas with eight drops of blood which, viewed from today's perspective, could auger the beginning of blood shedding in the region.

Štafetom je najbolje manifestovana idea zajedništva. Zamišljena kao opšte jugoslovenska manifestacija, predstavljala je sinonim za masovnost i raznovrsnost telesnog i duhovnog razvoja najšireg sloja građanstva, bez obzira na klasnu, versku i nacionalnu pripadnost. Primanjem, nošenjem i predavanjem štafete povezivani su svi koji su je držali u ruci, ali i oni koji su je samo videli i pozdravili. Okupljanjem ljudi oko zajedničke „stvari”, ujedinjavale su se široke mase i tako se identifikovao zajednički nacionalni identitet. Prvo i osnovno obeležje nacionalnog identiteta je istorijska teritorija, odnosno domovina, kolevka naroda koja je njenim pripadnicima „sveta”, koja im pripada, kao i oni njoj.¹⁴ Nacije su nezamislive bez zajedničkih mitova o teritorijalnom zavičaju i sećanju na njega, jer je to ono što domovinu čini jedinstvenom, a njenim prirodnim obeležjima daje istorijski značaj.¹⁵ Štafeta je povezivala sve krajeve zemlje kroz koje je prolazila, a trasa je vrlo pažljivo birana. Nije išla samo po planinskim vencima i nepristupačnim krajevima, već se vodilo računa da obide mesta vezana za istoriju Jugoslavije, poprišta velikih bitaka revolucije, čime je stvarana ikonografija nacije, a sve u skladu sa godišnjicom koja se te physical and spiritual development of the general population on a massive scale, irrespective of class, religion and national affiliation. Accepting, carrying and handing-over the relay baton established connection not only among all those who carried it in their hands but also among those who saw it and cheered it. By gathering people around common "matter" broad masses of the population were united, and in that way common national identity was identified.

The first and basic feature of a national identity is its historical territory, native land, a "sacred" cradle of the people that belongs to them as they belong to it.¹⁴ Nations are inconceivable without common myths about a territorial homeland and memory of it, because that is what makes homeland unique and gives its natural characteristics a historical significance.¹⁵ The Relay Race connected all parts of the country it passed through and the route was chosen very carefully. It went not only along mountain ridges and through hardly accessible parts but account was taken to visit places connected with the history of Yugoslavia, sites of big battles in the revolution, thus creating iconography of the nation and fitting in that year's anniversary celebrations. For instance, 1951 was the year of the tenth anniversary of the uprising, ten years in freedom were celebrated in 1955, 1958 was the year of the fifteenth anniversary of the battle on Sutjeska River, 1959 - the fortieth anniversary of the Communist Party, 1963 - the AVNOJ anniversary, 1966 - the twenty-fifth anniversary of the forming of the first proletarian brigade at Rudo, 1967- the thirtieth anniversary of Tito's coming to the head of the Communist Party, 1969 - the twenty-fifth anniversary of the failed rush on Drvar, etc. Starting points of relay races were places important from the viewpoint of the People's Liberation War or socialist godine obeležavala. Na primer, 1951. godina je bila u znaku desetogodišnjice ustanka, 1955. godine se slavilo deset godina u slobodi, 1958. godine petnaest godina od bitke na Sutjesci, 1959. godine četrdesetogodišnjica Komunističke partije, 1963. godine jubilej AVNOJ-a, 1965. dvadeset godina od oslobođenja zemlje, 1966. godine dvadeset pet godina od formiranja I proleterske brigade u Rudom, 1967. godine trideset godina od dolaska Tita na čelo Komunističke partije, 1969. godine dvadesetpetogodišnjica neuspelog desanta na Drvar itd. Mesta iz kojih su štafete polazile takođe su bila značajna sa aspekta Narodnooslobodilačke borbe ili socijalističke obnove i izgradnje, pa je tako štafetama data vrednost simbola zbratimljenih i jedinstvenih naroda Jugoslavije, ali i vrednost simbola legitimne vlasti Josipa Broza Tita u ime naroda.

PROSLAVE U ČAST TITOVE ŠTAFETE – ŠTAFETE MLADOSTI

Na samom kraju Drugog svetskog rata dok je u nekim delovima zemlje bila još uvek jaka privrženost Kralju i pojedinim nacionalnim vođama, bilo je neophodno približiti narodu vođu antifašističkog i oslobodilačkog pokreta koji je iz rata izšao kao pobednik. Partizanski odredi su već pevali pesme o svom vrhovnom komandantu Titu pred kojim je sada bila izgradnja nove vlasti i nove države.¹ Među brojne dobre vetrove koji su duvali u njegova jedra uvrstio se i dopis o masovnoj omladinskoj štafeti koji je, 10. aprila 1945. godine Centralni odbor Ujedinjenog saveza antifašističke omladine Jugoslavije (USAOJ) uputio savezima antifašističke omladine.² Iako je nošenje štafete, pre svega, podsećalo na sportsku disciplinu, treba je shvatiti u njenom osnovnom značenju. U srednjem veku štafeta (italijanski-staffetta, francuski-estafette) je značila - glasonoša. Štafetna palica je u sebi čuvala poruku dobrih želja i čestitki Josipu Brozu Titu za rođendan. Ona se trčanjem kilometrima prenosila iz ruke u ruku, sve do Beograda. Taj ritual je bio deo zaveta da će omladina izvršiti ono što se od nje očekuje (da bude vredna, poslušna i da će slediti Titov put).³ Od 1945. do 1979. godine omladina Jugoslavije ispunjavala svoj zavet.

Ideju da se štafetnim trčanjem prenosi palica u kojoj će biti čestitke za rođendan Josipu Brozu dao je Josip Prohaska, profesor fiskulture u Kragujevcu, koji je pre rata bio član

CELEBRATIONS IN HONOUR OF TITO'S RELAY RACE – YOUTH RELAY RACE

*At the very end of World War II, while in some areas of the country strong devotion to the king and individual national leaders was still felt, it was necessary to bring closer to people the leader of the anti-fascist and liberation movement who came out of the war as the winner. Partisan detachments already sang about their commander-in-chief Tito who was now facing the building up of new authorities and a new state.¹ Among many favourable winds that blew into his sails, there came a letter about a mass youth relay baton that the Central Board of the Union of Associations of Anti-Fascist Youth of Yugoslavia (USAOJ) sent on 10 April 1945 to associations of anti-fascist youth.² Although carrying of baton mostly reminds of an athletic discipline, it should be understood in its basic meaning. In the Middle Ages, relay race meant (in Italian – staffetta, in French – estafette) – a messenger. The baton contained message of best wishes to Josip Broz Tito for his birthday that was carried kilometre after kilometre, from hand to hand, all the way to Belgrade. The ritual was part of a pledge given by the youth to do what was expected of it: to be hardworking, obedient and to follow Tito's way³. From 1945 to 1979 the youth of Yugoslavia was fulfilling its pledge.*

Sokolskog društva. Savez sokola Kraljevine Jugoslavije je, od 1936. godine 6. septembra, povodom rođendana kralja Petra II Karađorđevića, organizovao gimnastičke vežbe, sletove, defile i sportska takmičenja sokolaca.⁴ Sokolima je bila bliska ideja jugoslovenstva i zajedništva, a pokrovitelj Saveza bio je kralj, to jest prva ličnost u zemlji, kome je, takođe, predavana Kraljeva štafeta.⁵ Tako je, kao normalan sled predratne tradicije, nastalo obeležavanje rođendana Josipa Broza.⁶

Organizovanje „Titove štafete“ bilo je razgranato od škola, radnih kolektiva, mesnih zajednica do gradova. Sve ove štafete se „slivaju“ u mesne; mesne štafete se „slivaju“ u sreske, a sreske u republičke. U republičke se slivaju i mnoge štafete društvenih i sportskih organizacija: Saveza boraca, narodne tehnike, streljačke, planinarske, saveza za konjički sport, biciklističke, pionirske, vatrogasne, omladinske sa radnih akcija.”⁷ Vojska je organizovala štafete graničara, kopnenih snaga, vazduhoplovstva i mornarice. Cilj je bio da što veći broj mladih učestvuje u pisanju čestitki voljenom Titu, pripremi programa povodom dočeka i ispraćaja štafete, u njenom nošenju i pretrčanjanju desetina hiljada kilometara da bi one, 25. maja, stigle u Beograd. Angažovanje što većeg broja mladih u masovnim sportskim manifestacijama bilo je dobar način političko-propagandnog rada za sve one koji nisu bili članovi KPJ ili SKOJ-a.⁸

Trg Republike, 1949. god.

The idea of carrying the baton with best wishes for the birthday of Josip Broz by a relay race was originated by Josip Prohaska, a physical exercise teacher in Kragujevac who was member of the Sokols (Falcon) Society before the war. Since 1936 the Alliance of Sokols of the Kingdom of Yugoslavia organized gymnastic exercises, meets, parades and sports matches of the Sokols on the occasion of birthday of the king Petar II Karađorđević on 6 September.⁴ The idea of Yugoslavianism and togetherness was close to Sokols and patron of the Alliance was the king, i. e. the first personality of the country, who had also been handed the King's baton.⁵ Thus, as a normal sequence of pre-war tradition, the birthday of Josip Broz began to be marked.⁶

Organization of "Tito's relay race" was ramified, starting from schools, work- collectives, local communities, to the cities. "All these relay races merge" into local ones; local relay races "merge" into district ones, and district ones into the republic ones. Many relay races of social and sports organisations merge also into the republic ones: of the Veterans' Federation, association for technical education of young persons, rifle association, mountaineers' association, riding association, bicycling association, pioneers organisations, firemen companies, young people participating in working actions."⁷ The Army organized relay races of Border-guards, Land-forces, Air-force and the Navy. The idea was to have as many young people as possible participating in writing greetings to "beloved Tito", preparing welcoming and seeing-off programs for the baton, carrying it and running for tens of thousands of kilometres to make it reach Belgrade on 25 May. Involving the largest possible number of the young in mass sports manifestations was good work of political-propaganda for all those that were not members of the KPY or SKOJ.⁸

Josip Broz Tito je do 1956. godine štafete primao u Belom dvoru gde mu je uručivano više glavnih štafeta.⁹ Sve druge štafete predate su Kabinetu Predsednika Republike.¹⁰ Posle predaje

štafetne palice bio je organizovan koktel i razgovor J. B. Tita sa nosiocima štafete i brojnim gostima koji su bili predstavnici društvenih organizacija, radnih kolektiva, sportista itd. Od 1953. godine u organizaciji Saveza za telesno vaspitanje „Partizan“ pripreman je i kraći program sletskih vežbi. U Beogradu je svečani doček nosiocima glavnih štafeta organizovan na Trgu Republike ili Terazijama, a onda je, 1955. godine, povodom desetogodišnjice štafete centralna svečanost organizovana na stadionu JNA. Sledeće, 1956. godine, Josip Broz je prihvatio poziv da prisustvuje priredbi na stadionu JNA i u pozdravnom govoru predložio „da 25. maj bude uvijek smotra naše mladosti, da bude to dan sporta naše jugoslovenske omladine, dan fizičke i duhovne smotre.“¹¹ Stavljući sebe i svoj rođendan u drugi plan Josip Broz se distancirao od vidnog stvaranja kulta ličnosti.¹² Ovu odluku su mogli da iniciraju događaji u SSSR gde je otpočeo kritički osvrt na neprikosnoveni Staljinov kult.

Until 1956 Josip Broz Tito received batons at Beli dvor (White Palace) where a number of major batons were handed-over to him.⁹ All other batons were sent to the Office of the President of the Republic.¹⁰ After the baton was received a cocktail and a talk with J. B. Tito was organized for baton carriers and numerous guests, representatives of social organisations, work-collectives, athletes, etc. From 1953 the Association for Physical Culture "Partisan" prepared, specially for this purpose, a short program of exercises. In Belgrade a grandiose welcome was organized at the Republic Square or Terazije Square for major batons carriers and in 1955, on the tenth anniversary of the relay race, the central celebration was organized at the stadium of the Yugoslav People's Army (JNA). Next year, 1956, Josip Broz after having accepted the invitation to attend the event at the JNA stadium in his welcoming speech suggested that "May 25 may always be a review of our youth, the sports day of our young people, the day of physical and spiritual review."¹¹ Placing himself and his birthday into the background, Josip Broz distanced himself from evident creation of the personality cult.¹² This decision may have been initiated by the events in USSR where critical comments on untouchable Stalin's cult began to be heard.

Youth Day

After this statement of Josip Broz Tito numerous social organizations, on a number of meetings, considered possible ways of celebrating 25 May.¹³ The name of manifestation was discussed and it was decided that in the future it be called The Youth Day while the relay race would be The Youth Relay Race. In 1957 there were suggestions to make the day a school holiday, and to consider the possibility of making it a national holiday. Owing to quite a number of activities to be

Dan mladosti

Posle ove izjave Josipa Broza Tita brojne društvene organizacije su na više sastanaka razmatrale moguće načine proslave 25. maja.¹³ Raspravljalo se o imenu manifestacije i usvojeno je da to ubuduće bude Dan mladosti i da se štafeta zove štafeta mladosti. Bilo je predloga da taj dan u 1957. godini bude školski praznik a da sa razmotri mogućnost da ubuduće bude državni praznik. Zbog velikog broja aktivnosti koje je povodom štafete trebalo upriličiti (partizanski marševi i pohodi, turniri, razna sportska i kulturno-umetnička takmičenja, festivali, priredbe...) predlagano je da proslava traje nedelju dana od 19. do 25. maja. Oblik i karakter manifestacija određivali su organizacioni odbori gradova kroz koje je štafeta nošena. Najčešće su organizovani kampovi ferijalaca, smotre horova, republička prvenstva u streljaštvu, aero-mitinzi, defilei mlađih, proslava punoletstva, karavani mladosti... Od 1958. godine u Beogradu je, na više lokacija, organizovana nedelja mladosti sa vrlo bogatim programom. Najposećenija su bila dešavanja na Beogradskom sajmu i, kasnije, drugarske večeri u Domu omladine. Pored značajnog mesta na sletu na Stadionu, Jugoslovenska narodna armija je organizovala različite aktivnosti po kasarnama, posete arranged in connection with the relay race (partisan marches and campaigns, tournaments, various athletic, and cultural and artistic events, festivals, performances...) celebration was suggested to last a full week from 19 to 25 May. The form and character of events were decided upon by organizing committees of cities which the relay race with the baton was going through. Camps for members of Student Vacation Association, review of choirs, republic rifle championships, air shows, parades of the young, celebration of coming of age, caravans of youth were most frequently organized... Since 1958, on a number of locations in Belgrade, a youth week was organized with a very rich program. Most frequented were the events at the Belgrade Fair Ground and, later on, comrade-gatherings at the Youth Centre. In addition to having one of the major roles in the rally at the stadium, the Yugoslav People's Army organized other various activities in the army barracks, visits to the museums, literary evenings, entertainment shows performed by soldiers in neighbouring villages and smaller places and, the most important, performances for young people in JNA clubs.¹⁴ In the first few muzejima, književne večeri, zabavni program koji su vojnici izvodili u okolnim selima i manjim mestima i, kao najznačajnije, priredba za omladinu u Domovima JNA.¹⁴ Prve dve-tri godine insistirano je na „zabavnim momentima”, kasnije postepeno i pomalo počinje da se menja karakter proslave. „I zato ove godine proslava Dana mladosti neće biti samo šarena vesela povorka, već i široka ozbiljna manifestacija rada i uspeha mlađih.”¹⁵ Više se pisalo o doškolovanju mlađih, rekordnim rezultatima u poljoprivredi, novim kilometrima asfaltnog puta... U Zrenjaninu je, 1968. godine, organizovan prvi Omladinski festival rada.

Kao centralna proslava ostala je priredba sa dočekom štafete na stadionu JNA u Beogradu. „Priredba na Stadionu po sadržini i izvođačima trebala bi da bude smotra naših najkvalitetnijih dostignuća. Mišljenja smo da bi to trebalo da bude kombinovani kulturno-sportski festival u kome bi uzeli učešća organizacije fizičke kulture, omladinska kulturno-umetnička društva, organizacije Narodne tehnike i Jugoslovenske narodne armije. Na ovoj priredi nastupili bi najbolji pojedinci i kolektivi. Tom prilikom održala bi se i završna, finalna takmičenja u najinteresantnijim granama i disciplinama.”¹⁶ Formiran je Savezni odbor za organizaciju proslave „Dana mladosti” koji je predložio da se ubuduće predaja štafete obavlja na stadionu JNA. Tako je u periodu od 1957. do 1979. godine Josip Broz štafetu mladosti primao na Stadionu. Izuzetak se dogodio tri puta: 1967. i 1968. godine štafetu je primio ispred Belog dvora, a 1978. godine nosioci su mu štafetu predali na Brioni.

Za likovni nacrt štafetne palice i sletske vežbe za završnu svečanost raspisivan je konkurs. Komisija u promenjivom sastavu birala je najbolje rešenje. Prvih godina to su bila atletska takmičenja: pionirska trka, trka na 110 m sa preponama; trka na 800 m; vežbe sa vijačom i obručom; vežbe na spravama; grupna vežba sa puškom i slično.¹⁷ Muziku su, između ostalih, years the accent was on “entertainment” while later on, gradually, the character of celebration changed. “This year, the Youth Day celebration will not only be a colourful, merry procession but also a wide, serious demonstration of work and successes of young people.”¹⁵ More was written about the additional education of the young, optimal results in agriculture, new kilometres of asphalt roads... In 1968 the first Youth Festival of Work was organized in Zrenjanin.

The central performance was welcoming of the baton at the stadium of JNA in Belgrade. “The performance at the stadium should be, regarding the contents and performers, the review of our best achievements. We are of opinion that it should be a combined cultural and athletic festival in which organizations of physical culture, youth cultural and artistic societies, organizations of technical education for young people and Yugoslav people’s Army should take part. The best individuals and collectives would participate in the performance. On this occasion final competitions in the most interesting branches and disciplines would take place.”¹⁶ The Federal Board for Organization of the Celebration of Youth Day was established and it suggested that handing-over the baton should be organized at the stadium of JNA in future. Accordingly, from 1957 to 1979, Josip Broz was receiving the Relay Baton of Youth at the stadium. There were three exceptions: in 1967 and 1968 he had received the baton in front of Beli dvor, and in 1978 the carriers of the baton handed it over to him on the island of Brioni.

An annual competition was held both for visual design of the baton and for the rally exercises to be performed at the final ceremony. A commission of changeable members would select the best of the offered proposals. In the first years those were mostly athletic komponovali Dušan Skovran i Bojan Adamič. Slet je vremenom od sportske manifestacije sve više imao muzičko-zabavni karakter. Svake godine sa novim simboličnim nazivom¹⁸ program je „na spektakularan način trebao da zaokruži sadržinsku celinu i da bude kruna raspoloženja i želja današnje mlade generacije.“¹⁹ Odbor za proslavu je svake godine iznova razmatrao koncepciju završne priredbe uočavajući „da se ona doteruje i dograđuje neprekidno (u konceptujskom smislu) i došlo se do granice na kojoj se treba odlučiti: da li zadržati dosadašnji karakter priredbe (slet sa umetničkim komponentama) ili tražiti nove puteve i rešenja u postojećim ili novonastalim uslovima... Ukoliko se opredelimo da priredba treba, još više, da postane spektakl, neponovljiv, jedinstven u nas treba se truditi da bude autorizovana u većoj meri nego do sada.“²⁰ Bilo je primedbi na programe koji su organizovani u pojedinim gradovima prilikom dočeka štafete te je ocenjeno da su „zadržali pomalo konvencionalni politički smisao.“²¹

U realizaciji završne svečanosti učestvovali su poznati umetnici pozorišne i muzičke scene Jugoslavije.²²

Štafeta mladosti je svake godine polazila iz druge republike i drugog grada.²³ Svečani polazak štafete je ujedno bio i simbolično obeležavanje neke godišnjice važne za istoriju KPJ/SKJ, NOB-a ili socijalističke izgradnje zemlje.²⁴ U gradovima iz kojih je polazila, kroz koje je prolazila, ili gde je „noćila“ štafeta, pripreman je program (recitali, izložbe, sportske igre) u kome su učestvovali učenici i omladinci, a vremenom su organizovani koncerti i igranke „pod vedrim nebom“, što je u manjim mestima bio centralni događaj za tu godinu.

U svojoj tridesetogodišnjoj istoriji štafeta mladosti je pošla iz uže Srbije 5 puta, sa Kosova 3; iz Vojvodine 2; iz Bosne i Hercegovine 5; iz Hrvatske 5, iz Makedonije 4; Slovenije 4 i iz Crne Gore 3 puta.

competitions: racing of pioneers, 110-meter hurdles; 800-meter race; rope-skipping and hoop exercises; apparatus gymnastics; group exercises with rifles, etc. ¹⁷ Music was composed by Dušan Skovran and Bojan Adamič, among others. Over a time, the Rally changed in character and from sports manifestation turned into a musical and entertaining event. Prvi i poslednji nosilac štafete birani su iz redova pionira i omladine. Pazilo se da najbolji omladinci budu birani iz redova studenata, sportista, radnika različitih grana privrede, zemljoradnika i predstavnika JNA. Uspesi u radu, na nekom takmičenju, u školi ili na fakultetu, kao i društveno-politička angažovanost, bili su preporuka za pojedinca da dobije tako prestižnu počast kao što je bilo da preda štafetu Josipu Brozu Titu na stadionu JNA.²⁵ Svi veći dnevni listovi kao i magazini objavljivali su fotografije i po neki intervju izabrane omladinke ili omladinca. „To je rijetka prilika da se jednoj ličnosti iz redova mlađih posveti malo veća pažnja... Međutim, pažnja koja se pridaje mlađim ljudima, stvaraocima, entuzijastima i sličnim vrijednim ljudima je minimalna, beskrvna, a očituje se suvoparnim vijestima i izveštajima.“²⁶

Omladinci koji su predavali štafetu palicu su za uspomenu na poklon dobijali zlatni sat koji im je uručivao lično Josip Broz Tito.

occasion of welcoming the baton and it was evaluated that they "retained somewhat conventional political character."²¹

In realization of the final ceremony renowned theatre and musical artists of Yugoslavia took part.²²

The Youth Relay Race set off on its way every year from a different republic and a different city.²³ The ceremonious departure of the Relay Race coincided with a symbolic marking of an important anniversary in the history of KPJ/SKJ, NBO or socialist building up of the country.²⁴ In cities and towns where it set off from, passed through or "stayed overnight", a program was prepared (recitals, exhibitions, sports events) where pupils and young people took part, and over a time, concerts and dances "in the open" were organized, to be the central events of the year in smaller places.

In its thirty-year long history, the Youth Relay Race started out of Serbia-proper 5 times, from Kosovo 3 times, Vojvodina 2 times; Bosnia and Herzegovina 5 times, Croatia 5 times, Macedonia 4 times, Slovenia 4 times and Montenegro 3 times.

The first and the last baton carriers were selected from among pioneers and young people. Care was taken to choose the best young men from among students, sportsmen, workers of different economic branches, farmers and representatives of the Yugoslav People's Army (JNA)... Achievements in work, at a competition, at school or university along with social and political engagement were a recommendation for an individual to be honoured to hand over the Baton to Josip Broz Tito at the JNA stadium.²⁵ All major daily newspapers and magazines published photographs and an occasional interview with the chosen young girl or young man. "It was a rare occasion to pay somewhat

Od 1946. do 1956. godine Josip Broz je, ispred svečano ukrašenog Belog dvora u prisustvu političkih i državnih funkcionera, dočekivao nosioce štafeta. Posle predaje štafetne palice organizovan je koktel i razgovor J. B. Tita sa nosiocem štafete i brojnim gostima koji su bili predstavnici društvenih organizacija, radnih kolektiva, sportista... Kada je 1957. godine program prenet na stadion JNA prijem gostiju u Belom dvoru zadržan je kao tradicionalan susret građana sa voljenim Predsednikom. Svake godine je Kabinetu Josipa Broza stizalo na stotine pisama kojima su građani iskazivali svoju želju da budu primljeni da lično čestitaju rođendanu Titu.²⁷ Izbor delegata koji će 25. maja doputovati u Beograd nije zavisio od Kabineta već od Centralnih komiteta SK republika i Centralnog komiteta Saveza omladine Jugoslavije koji su učestvovali u poslovima oko organizovanja Dana mladosti. Kabinet je samo ponekad u svojim dopisima ukazivao da se poneko obraćao više puta i da bi, možda, trebalo imati u vidu ove zahteve. Broj gostiju se merio stotinama i prijemi su morali da budu organizovani u prepodnevnim i popodnevним časovima. Često je za pionire, koji su bili najbrojnija grupa, organizovan poseban prijem, pripremno posebno posluženje, a pre odlaska oni su dobijali bombonjere na poklon. Tito se trudio da sa svima prozbori po koju reč, a na kraju prijema bilo je obavezno fotografisanje. Za ove mališane sve to je bio poseban događaj. Do 1963. godine, prilikom čestitanja, svoje predstavnike su imale sve republike, Savez studenata Jugoslavije, strani studenti u Jugoslaviji, graditelji autoputa, pojedine društvene organizacije (ferijalci, gorani, izviđači, biciklisti i td.) što je znatno otežavalo organizovanje prijema i njihovih susreta sa Titom. Sledеće godine, obrazovana je jedinstvena grupa: omladine, predstavnika radnih kolektiva i društvenih organizacija i vojske. Tito se svima obraćao, zahvaljujući im na trudu koji su uložili oko proslave njegovog rođendana, ali i na podršci u vođenju zemlje i postizanju rezultata važnih za državu. Retko se dešavalo da govorovi izađu iz protokolarnog okvira.

more attention to a person from the ranks of young people...However, attention paid to young people, creators, enthusiasts and similar hardworking people is minimal, lifeless and expressed in matter-of-fact news and reports.”²⁶

Young people who handed over the relay baton were presented a golden watch as a keepsake by Josip Broz Tito in person.

Visiting Tito

From 1946 to 1956 Josip Broz in the presence of political and government officials welcomed baton carriers in front of the festively decorated Beli dvor. After the ceremony of handing-over the baton, a cocktail and a conversation of the baton carrier and numerous guests, representatives of social organizations, working collectives, athletes with J. B. Tito was organized...When the program was transferred to the JNA stadium in 1957, a reception at Beli dvor was kept as traditional meeting of citizens with the beloved President. Every year, hundreds of letters arrived at the Office of Josip Broz, in which citizens expressed their wish to be received in person to express their best wishes for birthday to Tito.²⁷ Choice of delegates that would come on 25 May to Belgrade did not depend on the Office but on the Central Committees of the League of Communists of the republics and on the Central Committee of the Youth League of Yugoslavia who were involved in organization of matters relating to the Youth Day. The Office sometimes only pointed out in written form that some people asked to be received several times and perhaps such requests might be taken into account. The number of guests ran in hundreds and receptions had to be organized both in the morning and in the afternoon. For pioneers, who were the most numerous

Ipak, 1959. godine pozdravljajući predstavnike omladine, Tito je kritikovao demonstracije u Makedoniji i u Zagrebu koje su pokrenute „navodno zbog slabe ishrane“... „I sada na Zapadu i na Istoku govore kako je u Jugoslaviji počeo pohod gladnih studenata.“²⁸

U govoru kojim je, 1966. godine, pozdravio predstavnike omladine Tito se osvrnuo na međunacionalne odnose. „Socijalističko društvo ne anulira nacionalnosti, njihovo historijsko porijeklo i dostignuća u prošlosti, ali u socijalizmu moraju da nestanu razne nacionalne nesuglasice. Niko nikoga ne sprečava da kaže da je Hrvat, Slovenac, Makedonac, Srbin, group, a special reception was arranged, special helpings prepared, and they were given candy boxes before leaving. Tito took pains to say a few words to everybody and at the end of the reception taking photographs was a must. For those children all that was extraordinary. Until 1963 all the republics as well as Students Union of Yugoslavia, foreign students in Yugoslavia, builders of a highway, individual social organizations (student vacation association, members of nature conservation clubs, boy scouts, cyclists, etc.) had their representatives on the occasion of offering best wishes, which demanded considerable effort to organize receptions and their meetings with Tito. Next year a unique group was formed of youth representatives, representatives of working collectives, social organisations and the Army. Tito addressed them all, thanking them for efforts made to celebrate his birthday but also for their support in governing the country and achieving results of importance for the state. It rarely happened that speeches went beyond limits of the protocol.

*However, in 1959, greeting the representatives of young people, Tito criticized demonstrations in Macedonia and in Zagreb that were launched "allegedly due to poor nutrition"..."And now they are saying both in the West and the East that hungry students are marching in Yugoslavia."*²⁸

In the welcoming speech to the representatives of the youth in 1966, Tito took up inter-ethnic relations. "The socialist society does not annul ethnicities, their historical origins and achievements in the past but various national disagreements must disappear in socialism. Nobody prevents anybody to say that he is a Croat, Slovenian, Macedonian, Serb, Montenegrin or member of any other nation. That is why I have to say now that I was surprised to hear that just here in Crnogorac ili pripadnik neke druge nacije. Zato ovom prilikom moram da kažem da sam bio iznenađen kada sam čuo da se baš u Beogradu među omladinom vrši anketa o tome koju nacionalnost više voli. Zar samo postavljanje takvog pitanja nije podstrekavanje onoga što je negativno i ozivljavanje nečega što je nestvarno? Po mom mišljenju, to je u najmanju ruku besmislica, ako se iza toga ne krije i neka druga namjera.”²⁹

Odstupanja od već ustaljenog programa bilo je 1968. godine, samo nekoliko dana pre početka studentskih demonstracija, kada je Tito štafetu primio ispred Belog dvora, a ne na stadionu JNA i kada je prijem gostiju obavljen samo u prepodnevnom terminu bez pojedinačnog čestitanja.

Prilikom obraćanja prisutnima Tito je rekao: „Razumije se i omladina sa pravom traži da u pitanju samoupravljanja ona će da učestvuje u punoj mjeri, da se njoj isto tako kao svakom drugom građaninu pruži mogućnost da učestvuje u samoupravljanju, da učestvuje i preuzima odgovornost u daljoj izgradnji socijalističkih društvenih odnosa u našoj zemlji.

Belgrade a survey is conducted among the young as to what nationality one prefers. Isn't asking the very question a provocation of something that is negative, and revival of something that is unreal? To my mind, that is a nonsense, unless other intention is behind it.”²⁹

Exception to the already established program happened in 1968, only a few days before students' demonstrations, when Tito received the baton in front of Beli dvor and not at the JNA stadium and when reception of guests took place only in the morning, without the individual expressions of good wishes.

Addressing the present, Tito said: "Understandably, young people rightly ask to participate fully in matters of self-management, to be afforded opportunity to take part in self-management as any other citizen, to participate and undertake responsibility for further building up of socialist relations in our country. We have not done enough in that respect...I am of the opinion that we have to make a strong turnaround, that is, not a turn backwards but forwards, to advance more rapidly with respect to self-management, to advance more rapidly with respect to our young people, solving their needs in life, their involvement in our social life with full responsibility, to solve more rapidly problems of unemployment, and we can solve it... Concern for young people, for the young generation that will in future be bearer of further development in our country - that must be our priority. That concern must be with us every day."³⁰ With such a speech Josip Broz appeases upcoming discontent and admits indirectly that the leadership realized its oversights and promises to do the best to correct them. The speech is critical in character but it does not show any wish for major changes and it is evident that direction will not be changed.³¹ This move, anticipating forthcoming demonstrations

Mi nismo u tom pogledu učinili dovoljno... Ja smatram da mi moramo tu učiniti snažan zaokret, to jest ne zaokret nazad nego napred, brže ići napred po pitanju samoupravljanja, brže ići napred u pitanju rješavanja naše omladine, njihovih potreba u njihovom životu, uključivanje u naš društveni život sa punom njihovom odgovornošću, brže rješavati pitanje besposlice i mi to možemo riješiti... Briga o omladini, o mladoj generaciji koja će u budućnosti nositi dalje razvitak u našoj zemlji, to mora biti prvenstveno sa naše strane učinjeno. Ta briga mora nas pratiti svaki dan.”³⁰ Ovakvim govorom Josip Broz smiruje nadolazeće nezadovoljstvo i indirektno priznaje da je rukovodstvo uvidelo svoje propuste i daje obećanje da će učiniti sve da ih ispravi. Govor ima kritički ton ali ne pokazuje želju za većim promenama i jasno je da se pravac neće menjati.³¹ Ovaj korak u susret predstojećim demonstracijama načinjen je u dobro odabranom trenutku, jer brojni mlađi ljudi iz raznih krajeva zemlje, sigurno ushićeni što su deo značajnog trenutka predaje štafete, trebalo je da, vrativši se kući, svojoj sredini prenesu veru u bolje sutra. Štafetu je primio od Eduarda Frankovića, automehaničara iz Pazina, a među gostima su bili i pobednici Omladinskog festivala rada kojima je Josip Broz kao nagradu uručio satove. Tako je slika o mlađom radniku kao značajnom graditelju društva bila potpuna. U isto vreme studenti su okrenuti nemirima u Francuskoj i u listu Mladost samo u najkraćim crtama govore o štafeti.

Josip Broz je koristio svaku priliku da se sretne sa mlađima i da ih u svojim govorima podrži i ohrabri. Pokazivao je razumevanje za njihove potrebe i zahteve iako ih nije rešavao. Pored prijema u Belom dvoru, Tito je dolazio i na drugarske večeri koje su organizovane u Domu omladine u Beogradu. Tako je njegova popularnost bila ogromna i kada mu je realna moć u državi bivala sve manja.

I posle Tita – Tito

I posle smrti Josipa Broza, 1980. godine, nastavljeno je sa proslavom Dana mladosti i sa nošenjem štafete koja se was made in well chosen moment because numerous young people from different parts of the country, surely thrilled at being part of a significant moment of handing-over of the relay baton, should carry back to their homes the faith in better tomorrow. Tito received the Baton from Eduard Franković, auto-mechanic from Pazin, and among the guests who were rewarded watches by Josip Broz were the winners of the Youth Festival of Work. In such a way an image of a young worker as an important builder of the society was complete. At the same time, students were following news of the riots in France and the relay race was only briefly mentioned in the daily paper Mladost.

Josip Broz took every opportunity to meet young people, give support and encourage them in his speeches. He showed understanding for their needs and requests though he did not solve them. In addition to receptions in Beli dvor, Tito used to come to the comrade gatherings organized in the Youth Centre in Belgrade. Thus, his popularity was enormous even when his real power in the state was decreasing.

And after Tito - Tito

Even after death of Josip Broz in 1980 celebrations of the Youth Day and Relay race with the baton which was now handed-over to the president of the League of the Socialist Youth of Yugoslavia continued. Memories of Tito were kept alive by numerous articles in the press, knowledge contests having for subject Tito and his revolutionary and peaceful way, and by 1983, 260 various publications on “life and work of Josip Broz” were published. Leaning onto his former authority current political leadership, faced with the increasing amount of problems (demonstrations in Kosovo, unemployment, fall in the standards of living) tried to keep status quo in the country. Round tables with sada predavala predsedniku Saveza socijalističke omladine Jugoslavije. Sećanje na Tita pothranjivano je mnogim napisima u štampi, organizovanjem kvizova znanja o Titu i njegovom revolucionarnom i mirnodopskom putu. Do 1983. godine objavljeno je 260 raznih publikacija o „životu i delu Josipa Broza“. Pozivanjem na njegov nekadašnji autoritet, aktuelna politička vrhuška koja je imala sve više problema (demonstracije na Kosovu, nezaposlenost, sve niži standard) pokušavala je da zadrži status quo u zemlji. Organizovani su okrugli stolovi o bratstvu, jedinstvu i zajedništvu mlađe generacije, Jugoslovenski susreti mlađih, koncerti, likovni susreti... Zatvarane su oči pred činjenicom da se o štafeti sve manje govori i da ima i protivljenja celoj manifestaciji.³²

Centralni događaj i dalje je bio slet na stadionu JNA koji je iz godine u godinu trpeo sve veće kritike. Veliku buru je izazvala scenografija za slet 1983. godine kada je Titova statua visoka 9,60 metara natkrilila stadion. Javnost se pitala „treba li nam Tito u nadprirodnoj veličini?“ Bilo je i grubljih komentara: „Bio je to Vitlejm u punom sjaju religije, misticizam, oblaci, Pontijeve straže“³³ Rasprava je trajala skoro šest meseci i organizacioni odbor se pitao da li da se nastavi sa štafetom. Već sledeće godine postavljana su pitanja zašto se završna svečanost održava na stadionu i zašto uopšte u Beogradu. Bili su uzaludni pokušaji da se program osavremeniti tako da tematske celine prirede ukažu na probleme mlađih i da sa angažuje što veći broj poznatih muzičkih grupa. Ponovo se 1986. godine raspravlja o ukidanju štafete. Promene u društvu su se odrazile i na promene prema Titu: „Neukus i na jednoj i na drugoj strani, rezultat je verbalnog izjašnjavanja „za“ ili „protiv“. Suštinski značaj njegovog dela pri tome je potiskivan u stranu na račun mobilizacije celokupnog društva, neophodne za prevazilaženje iskrslih problema. Titovo ime i jednima i drugima služilo je samo kao alibi.“³⁴

subjects such as brotherhood, unity and togetherness of the young generation; Yugoslav meetings of the young; visual arts meetings, concerts were organized in profusion ...Eyes had been shut before the fact that the relay race is less mentioned and that there were opponents to the whole manifestation.³²

The central event still was the rally at the JNA stadium which had been more criticized from year to year. Great storm was aroused by scenography for the 1983 rally when Tito's statue 9.60 meters high towered above the stadium. The public was wondering: "Do we need Tito in supernatural size?" There were even harsher comments: "It was Bethlehem in full glory of religion, mysticism, clouds, Pontius's guards"³³. Debate was taking place for nearly six months and the Organizing Board wandered whether to continue with the manifestation. The next year questions were raised why the final ceremony was taking place at the stadium and why at all in Belgrade. Attempts to modernize the program, to engage as many as possible renowned musical bands, to make thematic wholes of the performance point to problems of the young, all were futile. Putting an end to the relay race was discussed again, in 1986. The change in society was reflecting on the change of attitude towards Tito: "Bad taste on both sides was the result of oral "pros" and "cons". Essential meaning of his work was basically pushed to the background to induce mobilization of the entire society necessary for overcoming problems that had appeared. Tito's name served to both sides only as an alibi."³⁴

The scandal that happened in 1987 finally put an end to the Relay Race of Youth. A poster, made by a group of authors "New Collectivism", was in fact altered German Nazi poster of 1936; it was approved as the best one at a competition for an overall design, and gave rise to an avalanche of discontent.³⁵ It was a shame the more so that three independent commissions approved this solution and concept of the baton which could not be carried because of its form and size. The debate resulted in conflict between Belgrade and Ljubljana press and *Mladina*³⁶ launched a campaign “Relay Race, no thank you.” New visual concept did not push the spirits back into the bottle. A baton that had eight red drops at the top was not an invitation for reconciliation. In considerably low spirits the Baton passed through Yugoslavia for the last time. The message that it carried was in fact a warning.

Skandal koji se desio 1987. godine definitivno je ukinuo Štafetu mladosti. Plakat autorske grupe „Novi kolektivizam”, koji je bio kopija nacističkog plakata iz 1936. godine, i koji je pobedio na konkursu za idejno rešenje, izazvao je lavinu nezadovoljstva.³⁵ Sramota je bila tim veća što su tri nezavisne komisije odobrile ovo rešenje i ideju za štafetu koju je bilo nemoguće nositi zbog njenog oblika i veličine. Rasprave su dovele do sukoba beogradske i ljubljanske štampe i *Mladina*³⁶ je pokrenula kampanju „Štafeta, ne hvala.” Novo idejno rešenje nije vratilo duhove u bocu. Štafeta koja je na vrhu imala osam crvenih kapljica nije bila poziv na pomirenje. Sa priličnom malodušnošću štafeta je prošla poslednji put kroz Jugoslaviju. Poruka koju je nosila bila je, zapravo, upozorenje.

- 12 "Modesty of comrade Tito is notorious, attributing his successes and merits to the working class and his people. That is why comrade Tito expressed his wish to have 25 May as a youth day instead of a special celebration of his birthday. However, the love of our peoples expressed to their President through Tito's relay race is both by its content and its character a spontaneous manifestation of the development of our socialist revolution and building up." - 23 Povodom dvadesetogodišnjice štafete Savezni odbor za proslavu Dana mladosti je razmatrao razne aspekte proslave: između ostalog upozorava na činjenicu da štafeta ni jednom do 1965. godine nije pošla iz Crne Gore i da bi trebalo iz Slovenije odabratи omladinca koji će predati štafetu. Arhiv SCG, fond 114, fascikla 65.
- 24 Štafeta je, 1957. godine, pošla iz Kumrovcia, mesta rođenja J.B.Tita; 1958. sa Tjentišta, povodom 15. godine bitke na Sutjesci; 1961. iz Užica kao sećanje na Užičku republiku; 1963. iz „istorijskog“ Jajca; 1964. iz Skoplja grada koji se ponovo dizao iz ruševina posle zemljotresa...Politika, 25. maj 1973;
- 25 Savezni odbor za proslavu preporučio bi iz koje republike bi bilo poželjno da se odredi poslednji nosilac štafete, a gledalo se da bude uvek iz druge republike i često se odlučivalo za jednog između više predloga. Ali, mi u takvim slučajevima posredujemo i likvidiramo takve anomalije. Mi hoćemo da naši ljudi žive srećno, ali mi želimo i da ljudima bude jasno kada se nešto može, a kad se ne može...Ove ekscese, drugovi i drugarice, ja najoštije osuđujem, jer oni nisu bili na mjestu. - 23 On the occasion of the twentieth anniversary of the Relay Race the Federal Board for Celebration of the Youth Day considered different aspects of the celebration: it warned, inter alia, of the fact that the baton never started from Montenegro since 1965, and that a young man from Slovenia should be chosen to hand over the baton. Archives of SCG, fund 114, file 65.
- 24 In 1957, the Relay Race started from Kumrovec, the birth place of J. B. Tito; in 1958 from Tjentište, on the fifteenth anniversary of the battle on Sutjeska River; in 1961 from Užice, in memory of the Republic of Užice; in 1963 from the "historical" place of Jajce; in 1964 from Skoplje, the city that was being built again after devastations of an earthquake... Politika, 25 May 1973;
- 25 The Federal Board for Celebration would recommend the republic from which it would be desirable to determine the last carrier of the baton, and attention was paid always to choose from a different republic and very often selection was made from among a number of proposals. Likewise, account was taken of representing equally both sexes and representatives of all the peoples and national minorities. Archives of SCG, fund 114.

- 30 „Danas potresa svijet, mnoge zemlje potresa baš pitanje društvenih odnosa. Interesantno, ima zemalja, uzmimo, recimo, Francusku gdje nije materijalno pitanje u tolikom pogledu bilo taj faktor koji je doveo do toga što se danas događa u Francuskoj, nego društveni odnosi, učešće najširih društvenih slojeva, društvenih masa, radnih ljudi, inteligencije itd. u stvaranju novih društvenih odnosa u toj zemlji... Izgleda ono što smo mi već počeli prije osamnaest godina počima se danas, ne u socijalističkim zemljama, nego još više i na Zapadu. To znači da mi sa našim postupkom, sa našom brigom, sa našim potrebnama dalje usavršavanja društvenog samoupravljanja moramo ići napred brže nego što smo išli do sada". Tito da intervju u kome bi odgovarao na pitanja koja su mladi poslali redakciji: ko je kriv za sve manji broj mladih u SKJ-u, kada će se rešiti problem zapošljavanja mladih stručnjaka...? - 30 "It is the issue of social relations that upsets the world today, upsets many countries. Interestingly, there are countries, take, for instance, France, where it was not the material issue that was to such an extent the factor that brought about today's developments in France but social relations, participation of the broadest social layers, social masses, working people, intelligentsia, etc. in the creation of new social relations in that country... What we have begun eighteen years ago is likely to begin today, not in socialist countries, but even more in the West. That means that we have to progress even more rapidly with our way of doing things, with our care, with our needs to improve further social self-management than we used to." Archives of Josip Broz, KPR, V-7a, box 173.
- 31 The Secretary-General of the President of the Republic Vladimir Popović refused an invitation of the second program of Radio Belgrade for J. J. Tito to give an interview in which he would give answers to questions that the young sent to the editorial office: whose fault is it that the number of young people in the Communist League of Yugoslavia is decreasing, when the problem of employment of young professionals will be solved...?
